We regret that the friends, who together with members of the Manor chapel so kindly contributed to the improvement fund, were not present last night to enjoy the transformation made by a fresh coat of paint. All were pleased with the work, and taste displayed by Mr. Watson and his employees. The pastor's text was from the passage "Be not weary in well doing, for in due season ye shall reap, if ye faint not." Come, friends, and see the result of your kindness, for which we all thank you

Great credit is also due to our faithful members, Edward A. Anderson, who being appointed to superintend the painting, of the interior of the church, performed his duty in such an able manner. The members of the chapel extend to Mr. Anderson a vote of thanks for his kindness in securing the subscriptions from our friends.

BEECHAM'S PILLS

LETTER FROM DOYLESTOWN

Interesting Events at the County Seat Reviewed by Our Correspondent.

Doylestown, April 3.

Politics has again taken a back seat having been displaced by First of April business. The Roosevelt men are happy because despite the refusal of the Grundy Board of County Commissioners they will have the name of their beloved Teddy on the ballot at the primary election on April 13th. On last Friday Isaac J. Vanartsdalen, Esq., presented to the court the petition of H. Warner Hallowell, of the township of Warminster, for a writ of mandamus to compel the Board of County Commissioners to print after his name on the official ballot, the words, "Favors Theodore Roosevelt" for President of the United States. The application for the writ was argued in the morning by County Solicitor John L. Dubois, Esq County Solicitor for the Board of Commissioners, and Isaac J. Vanartsdalen Esq, for Mr Hallowell, and in the afternoon Judge Ryan filed an opinion deciding that Mr Hallowell's request be granted. This decision also applies to all the other Roosevelt candidates for delegate to the state convention and every voter will now have a chance to vote intelligently

An inspired quarter column article in the Sunday (Philadelphia) inquirer, dated from Doylestown, but probably written in Philadelphia, says at its close.

"Sentiment favorable to President Taft was never stronger in Bucks than it is today. This sentiment will steadily increase as the primaries approach. Bucks county will vote overwhelmingly for Joseph R. Grundy, of Bristol, for national delegate and the same support will be accorded Charles Johnson, of Montgomery While both Grundy and Johnson have withheld expression of their Presidential preferences they can be depended upon to further the wishes of their party in the district."

And yet in the face of this it is a generally admitted fact that if the vote was to be taken with "I am for Roosevelt" or "I am for William Taft," Roosevelt would win out by a large majority, and then, too, if you should ask Charlie Johnson "who is the Republican party in Bucks county" he would solemnly answer that "the Republican party is Joseph R. Grundy, of Bristol," and Joe in like spirit would assert that "Charlie Johnson is the Republican party of Montgomery county" so there is no doubt but that they "may be dependend on to further the wishes of their party in the district" because they believe they are the party. If one of the periodic lanslides should take place and the Roosevelt forces carry the district, who woud be the party then?

This section of the county was visited by a severe storm on Friday afternoon between three and four o'clock. The county seat escaped the worst of it but our neighbors at Warrington, four miles below, certainly made up for what we lost There was a high wind accompanied by rain and hail, thunder and lightning. The school house at Warrington was struck by lightning, the bolt going down the chimney and making kindling wood of a desk or two The storm gave out several loud reports and twelve-year-old Henry Garges had the shoes neatly and expeditiously removed from his feet and one of his great toes split open during the operation. Little Miss Modesta Abbott was thrown to the floor and of course the teacher was very much shocked at this conduct of the elements, especially the lightning. Several children were slightly injured but none very badly A trolley car was put out of commission and the motorman presented with a black eye and a topic of general conversation supplied that will keep the neighborhood busy until Willow Grove Park opens in May

The Bucks Coutny Public Service Company, with headquarters at Langhorne, has purchashed and taken possession of the gas plant at the county seat. Artificial light was first introduced into the county seat in 1854 and was manufactured at the site of the present gas plant It antidated the railroad by a few years and was prosperous from its start especially so before the introduction of electric light

The county seat is certainly making good its title as a musical centre, the credit for this is almost entirely due to the magnificent Choral Union that has led a flourishing existence here for several years.

Dr Lewis Watkins, organist and choirmaster of the Presbyterian church, assisted by the members of the quartette choir and other vocalists from the congregation, rendered Stiner's "The Crucifixion" in the church on Thursday evening. "The Crucifixion" is a musical narrative of the last days and hours of Christ. The choir was assisted by several soloists from Philadelphia, Howad Barnes, organist and choirmaster of St. Pauls Episcopal with the vested choir of the church, assisted by Mrs Henry Hotz, soprano; Mrs. Byron Fell, contralto; Dr. Howell Zulick, tenor, and Henry Hotz, baritone, rendered Maunder's sacred cantata, "Olivet to Calvary," on Tuesday evening April 2, 1912, at 8 o'clock, and on next Tuesday evening Miss Bertha Brinker, born within sight of the county seat, and who now bids fair to become one of the leading Prima Donnas of the world, will give a conceert in the Armor of G. Company, N. G of P., under the auspices of St. Pauls Episcopal church. Miss Brinker made her debut in Florence, Italy, as Azucena in the opera Il Trovatore and at once achieved success. While under engagement to sing in Rome she was compelled to break her engagement and return to this country owing to the sudden and severe illness of her mother. Recently Miss Brinker gave a private recital in the Metropolitan Opera House, which was attended by many prominent in musical circles and she will probably appear in this country in Grand Opera next season.

Last Wednesday night the county seat's vigilant and efficient fire company had another fire on their hands. This time it was at Aldie where the celebrated Moravian Tile Works of Henry C. Mercer is located. The location of the works is quite a distance away from the nearest fire plug and is over the borough line, out in the township. The fire started in one of the tile departments of the building and by the strenuous efforts of the firemen was confined to one room, doing about a thousand dollars worth of damage. Had it not been for the firemen with their chemical apparatus there would have been another story to tell of the loss of patterns, frames, valuable curios and other property, highly prised by Mr. Mercer, which could not have been replaced The morbidly curious, who are of no earthly use at a fire and only get in the firemen's way, raised quite a holler on Thursday morning because there was only a still alarm sent out and none but real firemen notified. Had the fire bell been sounded the crowd would have damaged the beautiful and well kept lawn at Aldie, much more than the fire did the tile house.

Hon. Mahlon Stout is showing great improvement lately. He is now able to get down stairs and as soon as the real thing in spring weather makes its appearance will be able to be ... doors. This is good news for his friends many of whom now hope for his permanent recovery.

The Bucks County Fish Protective Association fully believing that there is not an Anninias among them, has offered four prizes for the largest small mouth black bass caught by a member in Bucks county waters during the open season of 1912 and while they are sure their members will be absolutely truthful to satisfy the demands of those who are given to fish stories, they will compel each contestant to make affidavit as to the size and weight of his fish and to make assurance doubly sure he must also have two witnesses sworn to the truth of his statement. It is a great association and is certainly doing good work to promote the best interest of every sportsman who really loves to fish. Every angler in the county ought to join it even if it is only to go on one of the annual picnics when fish stories galore, without affidavits, are told by all of the active members and they are dandy stories too.

At present the indications are that Newtown will have no team to enter the Bucks County Baseball League this year Last year our team won the pennant, but there was too much professionalism about the team to make it popular with Newtown people who failed to turn out and support the games.

A thunder storm and heavy rain passed over this community between 3.30 and 7.30 Tuesday evening, leaving a disasterous fire in its wake. A bolt of lightning struck the fine big barn on R. Comly Wilson's farm, which is situated one and one-half miles north-east of town. This structure was entirely detroyed, but the livetock and some machinery was saved. The tremenduous blaze attracted many neighbors and Newtown people to the spot, who worked valiantly and saved the other near buildings. The roads were in such a heavy, muddy condition it was impossible to get the fire apparatus from Newtown to the fire. All telephones in that section of the country were knocked out by the storm, so it was impossible to accurately locate the fire for some time.

Monday was a busy day for a number of progressive women of our town. For on that day fifteen women circulated petitions and secured the signatures of almost every resident, in which the desire for dustless streets was requested for Newtown this summer When evening came, these same women, put in their appearance at a regular meeting of the Borough Council, and presented their petition, and earnestly plead for better street conditions at once. The borough fathers told the same old story, of no money available for the purpose of laying the dust. After considerable discussion, a committee of ladies was appointed to solicit for money, with which to buy oil, and council agreed to put it on the streets at its expense. After the women retired the borough fathers considered a very knotty problem, until a later hour. An engineer submitted an estimate of what it would cost to the borough to improve the streets that need it so badly, and finally an ordinance was passed calling for a special borough election, when the question of bonding the borough for $40,000 for street repairs will be submitted to the voters. This question of local interest is the chief subject of conversation about town this week.

A Story on Peffer.

Kansas City Journal.

Senator Peffer is now engaged in writing his memoirs. The book will include a list of all the bills and resolutions he introduced in Congress when he was Senator. This recalls a story. When the late Senator W. A. Harris, who succeeded Peffer, was in Congress, a long-whiskered progressive from North Carolina cam into his office one day, carrying a gunny sack full of bills and resolutions, which he had prepared, regulating the universe. He dug them out and stacked them up on the Senator's desk. "I want you to introduce them in the Senate," said he to Senator Harris.

"But I can't and won't do do it," replied the Senator.

"That's strange," said the tarheal. "Senator Peffer used to introduce all the bills and resolutions that I brought him.

A new name has been coined for candidates for state and national delegates, who try to dodge the Taft and Roosevelt issue. They are now called the "Trust me's." They want to be trusted, but won't trust the people.

It was evidently "anybody but Taft" in the North Dakota primaries. The Republicans dropped his vote of almost 80,000 in 1908 to less than 8,000. In fact North Dakota "recalled" their vote of four years ago.

Officials of the vatican at Rome last week refused an offer of 2,000,000 lire (approximately $400,000) made by moving picture men for the privilege of taking "movies" of the pope receiving the Easter pilgrimage. This is the most stupendous offer ever made for a series of pictures.

It required a dinner at the Bellevue-Stratford to convince Frank Croft that it was "Bucks county's turn" to have the Congressional nomination. The chocolate-coated candidate was easily appeased and was tossed the nomination for alternate delegate to the Republican National convention.

A princely gift of two and a half-million dollars to the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, at Boston, from an anonymous giver, is striking news in the educational world.

It is refreshing to find some one who can give a large sum without feeling the necessity of widespread personal advertisement, and again it is interesting to see that this gift is subject practically to no conditions. It is to be used for the buildings of the New Technology, and is waiting to be called for at any moment.

When the bill to repeal the tax on sugar was up for discussion in the House, Asher C. Hinds, Republican, of Maine, arose and loudly proclaimed that the ledger of the sugar trust in New York would show that the trust had sent checks to the campaign managers of both the Republican and Democratic parties. Mr. Hardwick, of Georgia, replied: He said that what Mr. Hinds had stated was true, but that the same book also showed that the check intended for the Democratic campaign fund had been returned uncashed, whereas the ones sent to the Republicans had been cashed and spent

FIRST PRESIDENTIAL PRIMARY.

The uniqueness of the North Dakota presidential primary recently held was eclipsed somewhat by the interest in the result of the election, says the Kansas City Star. The fact that no other election of that kind ever as held was overlooked as a feature of unusual interest, for the reason that within the last few years the people have become so accustomed to direct primaries that they do not regard even a presidential primary as an extraordinary event. But the spectacle of a Western state leading off in a movement which has become already a national issue, and obviously destined to supersede rule that has heretofore governed the selection of Presidents, is well worth reviewing.

The Republicans of North Dakota polled about forty-eight thousand votes. The Democrats did not poll anything like so large a percentage of their total vote because it was agreed that there should be no fight there on Governor Burke for the Democratic nomination. But the forty-eight thousand votes cast by the Republicans makes a wonderful showing in favor of the presidential primary. That is more votes than the Republicans polled in North Dakota two years ago, when there were full state and congressional tickets to elect and within ten thousand of their vote cast for President in 1908.

Under the Presidential Primary Law in North Dakota the candidate supported by the postmasters and federal officeholders was not in the running. The progressive sentiment in the state entirely eliminated President Taft from the race. Under a delegate convention system such a situation could hardly exist. The federal machine and the politicians would have made the President one of the leading candidates.

But postmasters cannot dominate primaries.

There is no chance to bolt a presidential primary such as North Dakota held last week. The delegates are instructed to vote for LaFollette as long as in their judgment he is in the race. After that they will go to Roosevelt, the second choice of the voters of the state. Scheming politicians and brokers in federal patronage cannot balk the expressed will of the North Dakota election. A national committee could not be counted upon to unseat the delegates elected by a majority of the voters if those delegates carried with them a certificate of election such as the North Dakota delegates will carry to Chicago.

North Dakota has reduced its representation in political conventions to the state and national basis of taking the matter out of the hands of politicians and restoring it to the people, where it very properly belongs. Five other states have the primary law, including New Jersey, thanks to Governor Wilson, and Massachusetts, thanks to the efforts of the Roosevelt men.

It is worth the while of any thoughtful citizen to reflect upon the progress made since Colonel Roosevelt awakened the progressive conscience of the [illegible] years ago, as revealed in the single item of [illegible] primary as held in [illegible]. It is only [illegible]

Catholics according to the Catholic Directory, the advance sheets of which were issued in New York last Thursday The total number of citizens of that religious faith is given as 15,015,569. Twenty years ago, there were but 8,615,135 and during the last ten years the increase was over 4,000,000 nearly 400,000 of which were gained during the past year. This is wonderful showing, but only what would be expected from such a spendidlly organized, and disciplined and aggressive church.

The hierarchy is composed to-day of three cardinals, fourteen archbishops, two titular archbishops, ninety-seven bishops, two archabbots and fifteen abbots. These direct the work of some 17,491 priests attending 13,939 churches. The church maintains 229 colleges for young men and over 700 academies for girls. In addition to this there are over 5,000 parochial schools, where 1,833,786 children are receiving an education, and the church is also conducting 289 orphan asylums where there are 37,111 inmates. In New York alone there are 2,778,076 Roman Catholics In relative strength Pennsylvania comes second, with Illinois third, Massachusetts fourth and Ohio fifth

The noonday Lenten services which are being held at the Garrick Theatre, Philadelphia, have attracted widespread attention, and at mid-day the theatre is thronged with busy men who drop in to hear the short sermons.

Dr Frank DuMoulin, dean of Trinity Cathedral, Cleveland, Ohio, spoke one day last week and made an eloquent appeal to men. A man is what he makes himself, declared the dean Learn how to stand for something, how to rise and never fall. The best way of preserving the martial spirit of a nation is not by armaments ,and navies and wars, but by the individual conquests of each citizen over the temptations that beset him. Dean DuMoulin asserted that every man had in God's image a guarantee of victory in this personal struggle. He held that man was intended by God to be the conqueror of the forces that tend to brutalize and degrade him.

The five druggists of Quakertown have formed a soda water trust, and advanced the price of sundaes. This action is taken on account of the increased cost of material and the labor connected with serving sundaes, and it is compulsory to take this advance. One of the druggists whose name appears in the combine for the boost in prices is a Republican candidate for the nomination for the Assembly. The Republican Assembly aspirant in conjunction with the other Quakertown druggists publishes the fact that small plates of ice cream will still be sold for five cents each. We believe that this combination of the pharmacists is in restraint of trade and the action is in in violation of the anti-trust laws.

AMONG THE EXCHANGES.

CHOCOLATE CANDIDATE QUITS

Germantown Independent:

Chocolate-coated politics in the Montgomery-Bucks Congressional district failed to survive even until the primaries. It has already collapsed. Frank P. Croft, who had started his canvass for the Republican congressional nomination in that district by a generous distribution of chocolate, has withdrawn from the contest, and the political refreshments of the campaign will consist only of the tried and tested dainties that have been called into use for such purposes in the past. When woman suffrage is a fact, perhaps candy and soda water may become important factors of political campaigns, but not before.

CROFT MEN HOT

Pottstown Blade:

The fellows who were conscientious for Croft are real "hot under the collar." "We feel," says one of them, "like a pack of dupes. No intimation was given to us until the eleventh hour that Croft didn't intend to file his petition, and to say that we were surprised is putting it soft. Magnanimity, they say—a decision to let Bucks have the chance, this time—prevailed with Croft. That sounds very queer to practical men I, for one, don't propose to do any more hustling."

GET BEHIND EASTBURN.

Hatboro Public Spirit.

The Anti-Machine Republican vote of this Congress district should be concentrated behind Hugh B Eastburn, of Doylestown. To divide it between two candidates Eastburn and Ober, will assure the success of Grundy's man, Bean.

TWEEDLE DUM AND TWEEDLE DEE.

Plainfield Daily Press.

No one would imagine for one moment that coal is scarce if they could see the coal trains being rushed through Plainfield from the mines to railroad sidings about Communipaw and other points. Pertinent question: What's the relation between a railroad and a coal company: what's the difference between the coal car and coal as to ownership!

FORTY-THREE AND NO RESULTS.

Tunkhannock Republican.

An army of two thousand woman invaded the United States capitol one day last week in the cause of suffrage. Not a window was smashed nor a brick thrown, the only weapons used being eloquent words, smiles and captivating spring bonnets. The militant English suffragettes would probably think that it may surprise some to know that the advocates of equal suffrage have visited Washington annually for forty-three years in the interest of the ballot for their sex.

New Auto Law in Jersey.

The new automobile bill which became a law on Wednesday when Governor Wilson affixed his signature thereto is of much interest to local motor enthusiasts.

The principal provision of the new law is that it permits all non-resident motorists properly licensed in their own states to operate their cars in New Jersey for fifteen days each year without registration, without paying any fee and without given the power of attorney that has been exacted under the old law to aid in the prosecution of non-residents who might violate the law.

his attorney, I. J. Vanartsdalen, of Doylestown, as the County Commissioners had refused the request when it was made by M Hallowell and other Roosevelt candidates for delegate.

Judge William C Ryan granted an alternative writ returnable at noon at which time John L. DuBois, counsel for County Commissioners, filed an answer, and argument was heard.

The action is similar to other suits which have been brought in several counties in order to get an interpretation of the Act of 1906.

Attorney Vanartsdalen based the contention of the petitioners on the section of the Act which reads:

"Each candidate for delegate shall have the right by fling a request with the County Commissioners to have printed at the right of his name upon the official ballot, in the space provided for that purpose, the name of the candidate whom he will support."

The petitioner in his petition set forth that Theodore Roosevelt is a candidate for the Republican nomination for President, that the state convention will nominate twelve delegates at large to the national convention and that a resolution will be presented in the state convention to instruct them to support Roosevelt.

John L DuBois, counsel for the Commissioners contended: First, That Roosevelt is not a candidate before the state convention, and the Act refers to the particular convention in which the delegate is a candidate. Second, The Act specifically requires that the delegate give the names of the candidates whom he will support in the convention. In his request to the County Commissioners the petitioner asks to have "favors Roosevelt delegates at large in state convention" after his name, failing to name who they are, in direct disobedience of the words of the Act.

Judge Ryan rendered an opinion on Saturday morning granting the mandamus. The order, in part, was as follows

And now, March 30, 1912, the alternative writ of mandamus in the above entitled case came on to be heard, on petition and answer, and was argued by counsel, thereupon, on consideration thereof, it is ordered, adjudged and decreed, that said answer is an insufficient return to the alternative writ of mandamus, and a peremptory writ is here directed to issue to the defendants, the said Commissioners of the said County of Bucks, directing and requiring that the request of the relator be granted, and that upon the official ballot for the Republican primary to be held April 16, 1912, there be placed to the right of the name of H. Warner Hallowell, the said relator, the words "Favors Theodore Roosevelt for President of the United States."

By the Court,
WILLIAM C. RYAN,
President Judge.

The costs of the suit will be paid by the county.

The Record a Market Authority.

The Philadelphia Record is the acknowledged authority for market prices. Merchants in Philadelphia all base their prices of eggs, poultry, butter, grain and country produce generally upon the figures quoted in The Record, and if shipping goods to Philadelphia either directly or through an agent it is important for the farmers of this vicinity to know every day what The Record quotes. They can always get The Record prices for their goods, and in some cases can make contracts on a premium basis if their goods are exceptionally well graded and show high quality. They will find that The Record will help them in the disposal of their products, and that they will get the full market value for them if they base their prices upon its quotations.

County Debt to Gov. Wilson.

Doylestown Democrat.

The people of Bucks county have added reasons for being for Woodrow Wilson for Pesident. On Monday he signed the Free Bridge Bill, which provides for the acquisition by Pennsylvania and New Jersey of all the toll bridges across the Delaware river and throwing them to the public free from tolls.

This measure is the same which was drawn by Senator Grim and passed by the Legislature of Pennsylvania several years ago and vetoed by Governor Stuart, but now that it has become a law in New Jersey and only awaits the concurrence of this State, there is little doubt but that similar action will be taken by the Legislature of Pennsylvania at the next session, provided the project is properly presented.

The signature of Governor Wilson marks another advance in a movement that is bound to succeed in the new future. Toll bridges and toll roads are relics of an age when different social conditions prevailed, and it is fitting that a progressive Democrat like Governor Wilson should initiate a new order of things. Bucks countians are intensely interested in the question of free bridges. By his action Governor Wilson has made many new friends on this side of the Delaware.

"The sleepy one roused a bit, peered uncertainly at Consul, and then he lapped over on his friend's shoulder. He had fallen asleep again. In a moment his friend's head inclined heavily toward the sleeper. The pair were sound in slumberland when I came on. Something I said aroused them. One nudged the other.

"'What's the brute doing, old chap?' he asked sleepily. The other gazed uncertainly at the stage.

"'You really ought to sit up a bit, old boy,' was his report. 'They've got the blighter telling stories now.'"—Herbert Corey in Cincinnati Times-Star.

Follow the Procession.

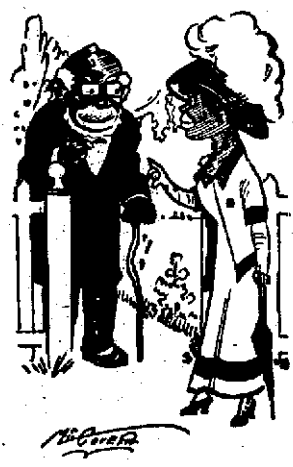

An Episcopal bishop in a New England state was the guest of a friend during his stay in a small town. The bishop conducted the services Sunday morning and seemed much irritated by the fact that his friend in the body of the church was always about five words behind the rest of the congregation during the recital of the Apostles' Creed.

At dinner that afternoon the eminent divine turned suddenly to his host and asked, with some asperity:

"John, why can't you 'descend into hell' with the rest of the congregation?"—Popular Magazine.

No Fancy Language.

Old "Uncle William" has been a faithful servant in a southern family for many years, and with his savings has taken great pride in educating one of his nieces. She had been to "boarding school," and on finally graduating had returned with something of the hauteur that white girls might assume upon finishing an academic course. Approaching "Uncle William" in the garden one morning his niece, as airy as she could and with much assumed affectation, said, "Uncle William, doe Uncle Alec continue to reside in th westerly portion of the town?" to which question "Uncle William," wit unfeigned contempt replied, "If yo' al mean does Alec still live at thar tai end o' Dog Hole, he do. Don' you come roun' heah slingin' yer Latin grammar at me."—National Magazine.

The Good In Him.

Robert, the new butler, had absorbed the contents of a bottle of very choice whisky. When he was fired and applied for a character his employer was rather put out to word the document in full light of the facts. We commend the result as a striking example of the resources of the English language. He wrote:

"Robert Smith has been in my employ only a week, but I know that there is much in him that is really good."

Stories of Gilbert.

One afternoon while drilling the ballet with extreme strictness Sir W. S. Gilbert observed that one of the girls was crying bitterly and making strenuous but ineffectual efforts to restrain her emotion.

"What's the matter, my dear?" he asked, smiling compassionately.

"Oh, Mr. Gilbert," sobbed the woebegone figurante, "the ballet mistress says I'm no better than I ought to be."

"Well, but you're not, my dear, are you?" rejoined Gilbert interrogatively.

On another occasion when the stage was full a messenger came on with a parcel for one of the actresses and displayed considerable activity in dodging the principals and supers while crossing from one wing to the other. Jessie Bond, who was standing close to the stage manager, exclaimed:

"Look at that agile creature, Mr. Gilbert. One would think he were dancing a pas-seul."

"Yes," was the instantaneous reply, "a brown paper pas-seul obviously."

Surprised.

Lady—I am surprised, little boy, to see you smoking that cigar. Boy—I'm s'prised myself, lady; I thought the man would never drop it.—Philadelphia Telegram.

An Expensive Luxury.

"Yes," said the literary man with a sigh; "style is a fine thing for a writer to have, but when his wife's got it too it takes all the profit away."—Harper's Weekly.

A Spunky Poet.

Ramsay Colles in a book about Ireland tells the story of a man whom he met in a public house. This person, without the formality of an introduction, presented himself to Mr. Colles as a poet. He then presented the following as a sample of his manufacture:

You should always keep yer house on the go.
You should always keep yer house on the go.
The sure and steady pace,
It's that as wins the race.
You should always keep yer house on the go.

Mr. Colles was not disposed to admit that the improvisatore had made his claim good.

"Why not?" said this person. "Hasn't it more sense than some of the poetry made by Swinburne or Yeats? Yeats wrote:

She brings in the dishes and lays them in a row,
With her to an isle in the water I would go.

"Now," he continued, "why did she lay the dishes in a row instead of one on top of another? Simply because the poet must find a rhyme to 'go.' And where on earth should an isle be but in water?"

The Old Oaken Bucket's Gone.

One day's excursion out of Boston is southward through the birthplace and ancestral home of the brilliant essayist Quincy to the boyhood haunts of Woodworth and the scenes which inspired his sweetest lyric. In Scituate, by the village of Greenbush, we find the well of "The Old Oaken Bucket" remaining at the site of the dwelling where the poet was born and reared. Most of the "loved scenes" of his childhood—the wide spreading pond, the venerable orchard, the flower decked meadow, the deep tangled wildwood—may still be seen, little changed since he knew them, but the rock of the cataract has been removed and the cascade itself somewhat altered by the widening of the highway; the "cot of his fathers" has given place to a modern farmhouse, and the "moss covered bucket that hung in the well" has been supplanted by a convenient but unpoetical pump.—Theodore E. Wells, "Literary Shrines."

Fingers Before Forks.

There are some rare occasions in these days of refined table manners when fingers are really permissible instead of forks, and one grows rather rebellious under too much restraint and wishes it were oftener so. Among the things one may eat with the fingers with propriety are radishes, olives, salted nuts, pickles, celery and asparagus where the little tongs are not provided, lettuce, endive or Romaine when cut to dip in French dressing or in salt; strawberries when served with hulls on them, biscuits and all small cakes, pears, peaches, plums, apricots, apples and grapes. Usually the large seeded fruits are pared and quartered. Legs and wings of fowls and birds may be taken in the hand, but it is not considered favorably. The firm cheeses, dry cakes, bonbons and sandwiches are all permitted to be taken in the fingers.—London Express

Irregular Pulses.

A pulsus paradoxus is a pulse that stops for a moment when you are taking a deep breath. It is nothing very dreadful, though it occasionally worries people to find their pulse has stopped.

A doctor who has been studying the pulse of various people has something interesting to say on the subject. "People get alarmed if their pulse is not regular," he says, "and yet plenty of healthy people have really extraordinary pulses A dot and carry one pulse is possessed by many people.

The pulses of athletes and others who take violent exercise for a short time go up at a tremendous rate. A runner the doctor experimented upon had a normal pulse beat of 76 to the minute. At the end of a hundred yards race his pulse was going along at 180 At the end of a hurdle race it rose to 204.—London Answers

Two Views of the Same Question.

A noted bishop in order to point a lesson in humility sometimes tells a story of a young clergyman whose first appointment was to be an out of the way and poor parish.

On his first Sunday in this new station the young man as he looked over his wretchedly clad and ignorant congregation could not help saying, to himself, with a groan:

"Dear me, what a dreadful thing it would be if I should have to stay here any great length of time!"

At the end of the sermon a deacon made a prayer. To the young man's horror one part of the prayer was a benevolent hope that "this ignorant, inexperienced, barren pastor that had lately come to the parish might improve and grow learned and fruitful in good works, so that he would come to merit being kept on there for awhile."

Where Books Were Pawned.

In primitive days books had a recognized and settled value. We know how they were exchanged for a horse or half a dozen sheep, but few people know the extent to which books were pawned in the middle ages Oxford at one time had twenty giant chests full of these valuable pledges, and the process when stock was taken had to be conducted with care. The book fairs served to alter things, and presently as Smithfield market grew it set up a subservient industry on its outskirts where the butchers sold skins and the parchment dealers bought. And this bookish street on the edge of Smithfield under the shadow of St. Paul's bore the pious name of Paternoster row.—Pall Mall Gazette.

Striving Vainly to Please.

"I suppose those garden seeds I sent saved you quite a little money," said the affable statesman.

"No," replied Mr. Growcher; "I hadn't the heart to waste 'em, and the result is that I'm in debt for garden implements."—Washington Star.

Afraid.

"Yes, I proposed, but she said I'd have to ask her mother first"

"And did you?"

"No; I was afraid the mother might accept me."—Judge.

He Kept Quiet.

Householder — Here, drop that coat and clear out! Burglar—You be quiet or I'll wake your wife and give her this letter I found in your pocket.—New York Mail.

Awed by the Servant.

The amusing mistake once made by two Abyssinian delegates of the Emperor Menelek to France is narrated by the Paris Gaulois. Awed by the splendor of his gold lace uniform and the solemnity of his imposing manner, they mistook the usher at the door of the foreign minister's office for M. de Selves himself. As they were brought into the anteroom the usher was standing with his hands on the door handle ready to announce them. But at the sight of his silver chain his medals, his sword, his gold topped cane and his three cornered hat the Abyssinians could not be expected to know they were in the presence of a mere servant. So bowing low repeatedly, they approached him slowly and with great respect until they were within reach of his coattails, which, one on either side, they seized in their hands and kissed. The usher did not know what to do, but the appearance of the minister relieved the situation.

Jumping Jack Tars.

The rhythmic jumping of 350 bluejackets saved H. M. S. Commonwealth from the fate of the Montagu when she ran aground in a dangerous place. The battleship Montagu was abandoned as a hopeless wreck off the Cornish coast, but her sister ship, the Commonwealth, was safely got off by the muscular exertion of her crew. The Commonwealth ran on to an uncharted rock when returning from target practice and was badly damaged. She was so nicely balanced in her lodgment, however, that it was decided after ... ing the engines had failed to extricate her to try the experiment of mustering all the available hands on the extreme aft and setting them to jump in unison. The regular jumping of twenty-five tons of solidly built seamen had had the effect of making the huge vessel rock seesaw fashion until she gradually floated off with the rising tide In fifteen minutes she was afloat and saved.—Pearson's Weekly.

Doing Her Part.

"Wife, will you thread a needle ... me? I want to sew on a few buttons."

"Why, certainly. There you are. Now, you can sew on your buttons while I go to the bridge club Sometimes I wonder how you managed before you were married."—Washington Herald.

His Suspicion.

"Why did you leave the place in which you were previously employed?" asked the head of the firm.

"I think," said the applicant for the position of office boy, "de boss was afraid if I stayed I might git his place."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Quaint Logic.

A bit of reasoning a la mode de Dumas ascribed to Rossini: "I don't like spinach, and it is very fortunate I don't, because if I did like it I should eat it, and I can't endure it."

A Delusion.

Blibson—How was Jones yesterday? Glibson—He seemed to be laboring under a strange delusion. Blibson—Indeed! I thought he was playing golf Glibson—So did Jones!

LIFE NOT WORTH LIVING

is the way Miss Alta Abel of West Baden, Ind., summed up her existence after having sought in vain for health. She writes: "I was a complete wreck —always tired, worn out and nervous. I had to spend about one-third of my time in bed

"Vinol, your delicious cod liver and iron tonic, was recommended, and I can truly say it has done me more good than all the medicine I ever took in my life That nervous and tired feeling is all gone I have gained in health, flesh and strength, until I feel like another person" (We guarantee this testimonial to be genuine.)

What Vinol did for Miss Abel, we know it will do for every nervous, run-down, overworked, tired, thin and discouraged woman in this vicinity.

Try a bottle of Vinol with the understanding that your money will be returned if it does not help you.
